

The Shows

“I was the shortest girl in every class, but standing up on stage I had a much better view on things. Best of all, I was given enormous amounts of applause and attention having leads in every school play from kindergarten and up.

At the age of five, standing on top of a coffee table at my grandmother’s house, I entertained her guests by singing and dancing to Swedish icon Sarah Leander’s song “Do you want to see a star?” The adults’ eyes were beaming! No one had ever looked at me like that before. And right then and there it just dawned on me: Entertaining is my talent in life. And from then on it was the only thing I really wanted to do.”

Eva has performed her own material and covers at numerous events and shows, both in Europe and in the US. One day she’s performing in the backyard of her neighbors’ house, singing at an intimate family birthday party, and the next she’s singing in the prestigious Globen, a large arena in Stockholm, Sweden, performing for an audience of 16 000 people.

She sings the hottest pop hits of today, and writes them too, but as an entertainer she has a wider musical range than pop music. Her audience can experience wonderful jazz songs from the 1940’s, dance through the disco era of the 1970’s, and enjoy the melodious pop culture of the 1980’s.
